The Vietnam War may be a generation removed from our collective consciousness, but it never looked like this! Revisit the conflict onthropomorphically chronicled through the eyes of three young, brave...rabbits. Join the courageous Special Operations Group—Perky, Rats, and Botoski—as they recon the booby-trapped jungles of Vietnam. Their mission: to engage the feline forces of the treacherous Viet Cong, ond make it out olive! Don't let these onimals fool you—this nightmorish experience is well researched ond carefully crafted around the history of the conflict. This fresh perspective daringly casts a new light on one of the greatest moral quandaries of the 20th Century. Apocolypse Meow, Vol. 1—the Vietnom War as you've never seen it before!

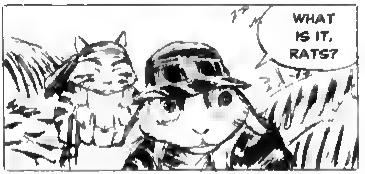
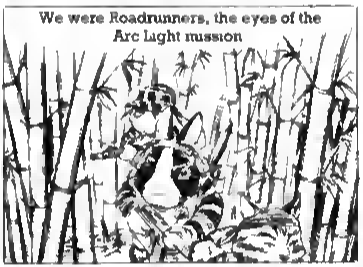
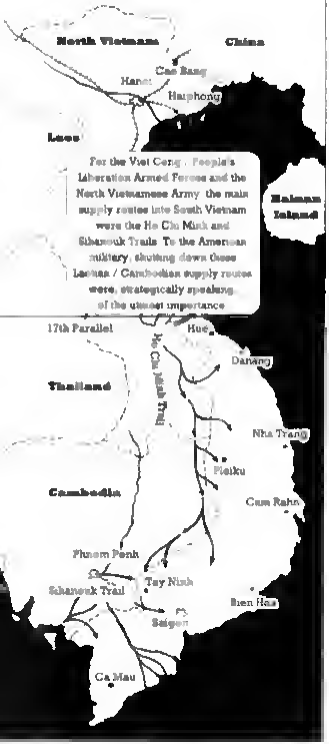
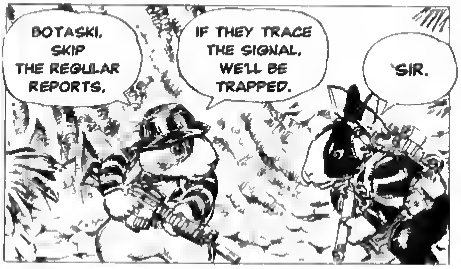
The Sniper





VLOOO





Recon patrol is always a risky proposition. The person who leads the platoon (the point man) plays an important role, but even more important is the soldier bringing up the rear. To prevent the enemy from coming up from behind and wiping out the entire patrol, movement is carried out in a doubling back pattern called a "fishhook."

The countries currently known as Vietnam Laos and Cambodia were colonized by the French in the mid-19th century as a French protectorate and were collectively known as French Indochina. The name "Indochina" comes from the fact that the region lies approximately between India and China. Colonial rule in this region was quite strict as it was in the other French colonies. (Incidentally the well-known Michelin tire company was originally a French Indochinese industry that prospered thanks to the local rubber plantations.)

Once World War II began Japan (allied with Germany) expanded its rule in China. When Germany invaded France in September of 1940 Japan led its troops into French Indochina to expand their occupational territory. This expansion led to the Pacific War which was fought from December 1941 to August 1945.

The defeat of Japan Germany and Italy brought an end to WWII. France attempted to reestablish colonial rule in the region which prompted the formation of the League for the Independence of Vietnam (also known as the "Vietminh") in 1941. On September 2nd 1945 Vietminh leader Ho Chi Minh declared his country the Independent Democratic Republic of Vietnam." A few years later the Vietminh fought against the French Colonial Army in the Indochina War (December 1946 to July 1954). Backed by the OSS (the Office of Strategic Services which later became the CIA) Ho Chi Minh's Vietminh fought against Japan during WWII and afterwards—backed by China and the Soviet Union—fought France for independence.

The world after the end of WWII was divided into two ideologies the communist camp made up of the Soviet Union (currently the Russian Federation) Eastern Europe and China and the capitalist camp consisting of the United States of America and Western Europe. The resulting "cold war" between these two camps spread to various second and third world countries escalating to the point that wars were fought in the colonies of Asia and Africa in the name of unification and colonial independence.

It was during this timeframe on the world political map that the rift between the East and West would widen spurred on by the spread of Communism in the Eastern European countries the closure of Berlin and the Chinese Revolution. In 1949 the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) was established to contain the spread of Communism.

The Korean War broke out in 1950 when North Korea—backed by the Soviet Union and later China—invaded the South in the name of liberation. This proxy war lasted for three years until the signing of the Armistice Agreement which more than fifty years later continues to remain in effect. Meanwhile following its defeat in the Pacific War Japan had come under the rule of the US Occupation Force which led to the drafting of Japan's "Peace Constitution" that forever renounced war. During the time of the Korean War Japan became a base to supply troops and goods to the US military. Under the direction of the Occupational government Japan formed the Police Reserve Force which would later become the Self Defense Forces.

In those days anti-Communism sentiment in the West was at its peak and political, military and economic aid to fight Communism was all strengthened. War continued to rage in Indochina and in 1950 the US began providing military support to the French dispatching a group of military advisors to Indochina. After the French were dealt a crushing blow at the Battle of Dien Bien Phu in 1954 a cease-fire agreement was signed at the Geneva Convention and the Indochina Federation was divided into Laos Cambodia, North Vietnam and South Vietnam.

Once the French military withdrew from the region the United States officially began providing military and economic aid to South Vietnam while the Soviet Union and China continued to unofficially support North Vietnam.

With the Indochina War (1946-1954) the United States began to actively involve itself in the region. In 1950 the US began to provide weapons for the French military as well as dispatch teams of its own military advisors. The 77th Special Forces Group (Provisional) was sent to South Vietnam in 1953, and Laos in 1954. As a result of the Geneva Accords Indochina was divided into the independent regions of Laos, Cambodia, and North and South Vietnam. Once the French had withdrawn its military the United States officially embarked on programs of military and economic aid to South Vietnam.

The main objective of the Green Berets (US Army Special Forces) was to train for those states friendly to the US both regular standing armies and detachments knowledgeable in unconventional warfare. In 1961 the 5th Special Forces Group was activated at Fort Bragg. The Group would go on to conduct all special forces activities in Vietnam including the overseeing of the CIDG (Civilian Irregular Defense Groups) Program which sought to form a paramilitary force from several of the region's minority groups. The program was a success and by the end of 1963 the number of CIDG members loyal to the Special Forces numbered 18,000 or 120 companies of 150 "Strikers" each. Under the command of SF (Special Forces) A Teams the CIDG conducted border patrols and fought against the National Liberation Front and the North Vietnamese Army.

In those days US Special Forces troops were not necessarily the "best of the best." With a paratrooper qualification more than two years of military service and a rank above Corporal one could become a green beret without any additional selective training. Charlie Beckwith founder of the Army's elite Delta Force counter-terrorist unit is credited with developing the SF into experts in unconventional warfare.

In 1962 Beckwith was sent to England as a participant in an exchange program between the US Special Forces and the British SAS (Special Air Service). He remained there for a year training under realistic fighting conditions alongside the SAS.

Beckwith became involved with the Delta Project in June of 1965 when he received the order to command Detachment B-52 of the 5th Special Forces in Nha Trang South Vietnam—his weed out process left just seven of the original 30 members of B Team remaining. The next day he sent out a mission to 90 Special Forces camps located all over South Vietnam with the intent of reorganizing Detachment B-52. Written on the memo was the message Wanted Volunteers for Project Delta. Will guarantee you a medal a body bag or both. As prerequisites applicants were required to have been in Vietnam for more than six months have a rank higher than sergeant and possess an infantry combat medal—in other words applicants needed to have actual combat experience. The next day brought with it a throng of applicants and he is said to have had a hard time turning them down. Next Beckwith built a training center on the jungle of an uninhabited island across from Nha Trang where the 5th Special Forces Group Headquarters was located. The center was a scaled-down version of the SAS's Select Training Course and there candidates were subjected to a battery of tests such as physical fitness, map interpretation, rifle shooting, and the ability to execute simple and clear orders. Scores of candidates dropped out of the program but finally Detachment B-52 ended up with 40 members. This number would later grow to 100 indicating that the Special Forces teams of those days were far from the small elite teams that we see today.

"Project Delta" was a cover name assigned it by the United States Military—the Project's true objective was to undertake special reconnaissance missions in cooperation with South Vietnam's own Special Forces the LLDB (Luc Luong Dac Biet). This cooperative effort never really succeeded however and so US Special Forces instead worked with volunteers (who came to be called "Yards") from among the CIDG Strikers to create special reconnaissance teams. Called "Roadrunners" these teams consisted on paper of two US Special Forces members and four CIDG Strikers. In actual combat however teams were often made up of four SF members and six CIDG Strikers (who were furnished with Viet Cong issue equipment and clothing).

The reconnaissance missions acted as the eyes and ears of the United States military with Roadrunners infiltrating enemy territory for extended periods of time to obtain tactical information. The real objective of the missions however was to scout out the enemy's supply route—the Ho Chi Minh Trail—which extended past Vietnam's border into Laos and Cambodia.

The success of Project Delta led to the creation of Projects Sigma, Gamma, and Omega. This prompted the US Infantry Divisions/Brigades to want special recon teams of their own and the training course that Beckwith's B-52 Deltas employed in Nha Trang was used as-is for the Recondo School for LRRP (Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol) training.

Up until Beckwith was injured and forced to leave Vietnam he worked hard to ensure that B-52 Delta could operate as independently as possible. They had at their disposal a rifle squadron answering directly to them (by 1970 there were 1,200 CIDG Strikers under B-52 Delta) their own helicopters (the 281st Assault Helicopter Company) and several FAC (Forward Air Controllers) who aided ground troops through the use of low speed planes such as the OV-10s as well as calling in fighter bombers should enemy activity require an air strike). This independent structure which Beckwith learned of during his time with the SAS became the basic model for US Special Forces.

Biography

Born: 1923 - Atlanta, Georgia. Graduated university, 1952, joined US Army. Sent to British SAS as colonel 1962, recognized importance of Special Ops. Involved in Project Delta (Vietnam 1965); survived shot to abdomen and returned to US (1966). Assumed command of the Ranger Training Course; returned to Vietnam - Led Delta Counter-terrorist Unit after the War. Retired from Army in 1981. Reviewed security plan of Los Angeles Olympic Games (1984).

[3] Russian — The former Soviet Union sent many technicians/military advisors to North Vietnam.

The United States became officially involved in the region in 1961, with the arrival of one of its Marine forces. The U.S. also requested help from their allies to help combat the Communist powers—below are the combined countries followed by the number of troops they contributed

|---|---|
| United States | 543,000 |
| South Korea | 51,800 |
| Thailand | 11,570 |
| Australia | 7,670 |
| Philippines | 2,200 |
| New Zealand | 500 |
| Republic of China (Taiwan) | 30 |

These countries were known as the FWMAF (Free World Military Assistance Forces), and together, they comprised the most powerful military presence during the 1963-1969 period. The U.S., Australia and South Korea were the only countries to engage in actual combat, and of these it was the Koreans that the Viet Cong most feared. Additionally the First Australian Task Force—which included Australian SAS squadrons—was considered superior to its U.S. Special Forces equivalent.

Soviet Military Advisor
Beginning in 1946, The Soviet Union sent some 3,800 military advisors to the region. The Soviets mainly gave instruction in specialized areas such as radar systems and surface-to-air missiles

Chinese Military Advisor
The so-called "voluntary army" sent some 150,000 soldiers and approximately 54,000 advisors who instructed mainly in tactical matters and the use of anti-air craft guns

People's Liberation Front (Viet Cong)
The fighting force for this organization included some 114,000 from the People's Liberation Armed Forces and 320,000 regional and militia forces

North Vietnamese Army (NVA)

U.S. Dollar : U.S. soldiers were given MPC (Military Paper Currency) to use as money. U.S. dollars were traded at high rates on the black market eventually passing through the hands of the Viet Cong and ending up in North Vietnam. Dollars became a foreign currency for North Vietnam and naturally were also used for international trade.

MISSION: 9

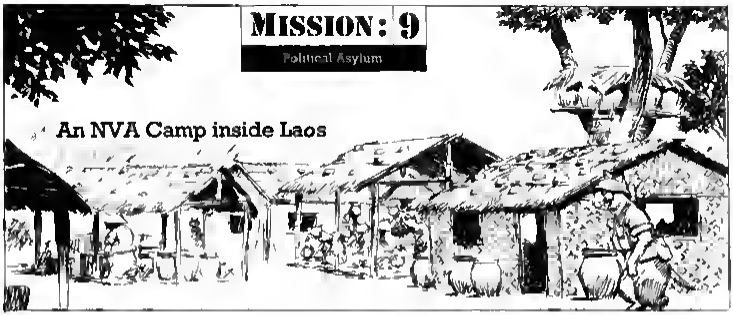
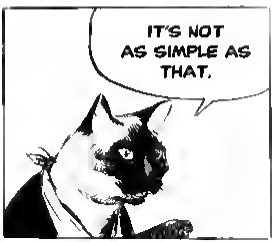
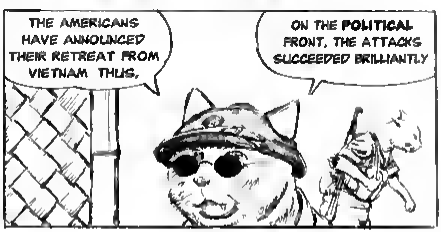
Political Asylum



THE [1]TET OFFENSIVE WAS A DISASTER. OUR ORGANIZATION IS IN RUINS
IT CAN'T BE HELPED. THE ORDER CAME DOWN FROM THE PARTY LEADERS THEMSELVES.



THE PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ARMED FORCES AND YOUR NORTH VIETNAMESE ARMY BOTH SUFFERED GREAT LOSSES.
STILL, THE PARTY CONSIDERS THE TET OFFENSIVE A SUCCESS.



THE AMERICANS HAVE ANNOUNCED THEIR RETREAT FROM VIETNAM. THUS,
ON THE POLITICAL FRONT, THE ATTACKS SUCCEEDED BRILLIANTLY.

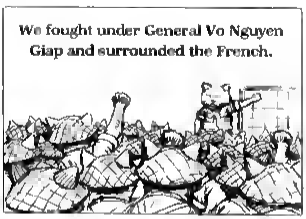
HOW MANY MORE OF [2]INDOCHINA'S PEOPLE ARE YOU WILLING TO KILL FOR THE SAKE OF UNIFICATION?!
YOU MEAN LIBERATION. AND WE'RE ALMOST THERE.

[1] Tet Offensive = The surprise attack launched late Jan 30, 1968. Broadcast feed of the conflict caused an uproar in America, with the result that American troops were withdrawn.

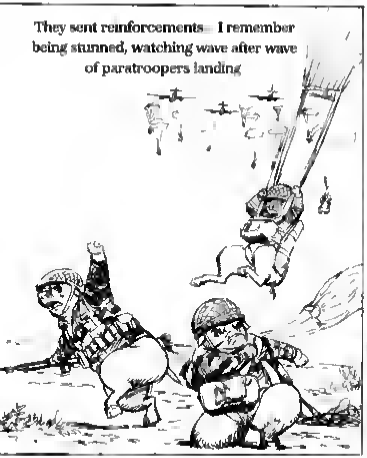
[2] Indochina = In the 18th century, France assumed rule over the colonies in Southeast Asia and named the region Indochina. Following the First Indochina War, Laos, Cambodia, and Vietnam were declared independent regions via the signing of the Geneva Peace Accords in 1954.

[3]Vietminh – Ho Chi Minh's army organized to fight against the French during the First Indochina War (1947-1954)

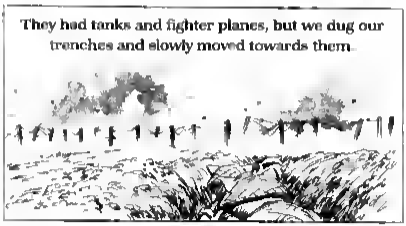
Our first big victory was at Dien Bien Phu



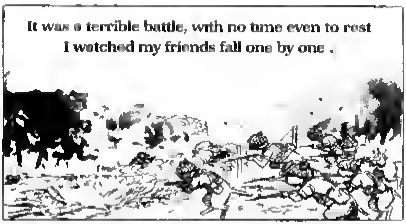
We fought under General Vo Nguyen Giap and surrounded the French.



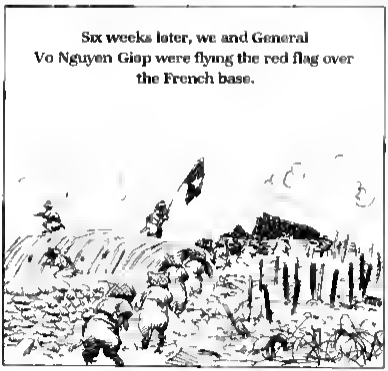
They sent reinforcements. I remember being stunned, watching wave after wave of paratroopers landing



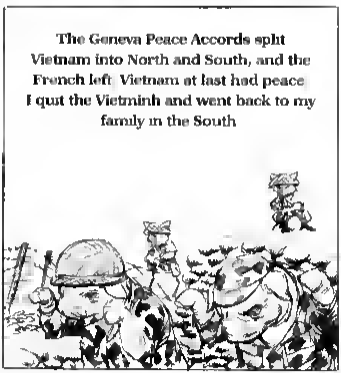
They had tanks and fighter planes, but we dug our trenches and slowly moved towards them.



It was a terrible battle, with no time even to rest I watched my friends fall one by one .



Six weeks later, we and General Vo Nguyen Giap were flying the red flag over the French base.



The Geneva Peace Accords split Vietnam into North and South, and the French left. Vietnam at last had peace. I quit the Vietminh and went back to my family in the South

But peace didn't last long This time the AMERICANS came, and in many ways THEY exploited us, too My two sons became involved with the National Liberation Front
One was captured as a suspected [4]Vietcong
Then the [5]PUPPET ARMY came to our village
My wife and children were killed . My village and fields burned.. I picked up my gun once again
I fought for years I even killed FARMERS if they were helping the government
I've committed terrorist bombings, killed people as they were begging for their lives. .
BUT I'M TIRED OF THE FIGHTING. I DON'T EVEN KNOW THE REASON WHY I'M KILLING ANYMORE.
WE'RE NO BETTER THAN THE PUPPET ARMY! I'M SICK OF ALL THE FIGHTING.
SICK OF IT!
I'VE FOUGHT FOR THIRTY YEARS! I'VE LOST MY WIFE, MY FAMILY... MY ENTIRE VILLAGE!

[4] Vietcong – Vietnamese People's Liberation Armed Forces

[5] Puppet Army = Term used by the National Liberation Front for the Army of the Republic of Vietnam (ARVN) whom the former accused of being puppets of the Americans

SKS

Manufactured by the Soviet Union after the war, but never came into popular use. The Chinese then began mass producing it, attaching a bayonet to the front and calling it the Model S6

AK47

The main weapon of the Soviets following the war, and the primary assault weapon in the Communist arsenal. There were many variations, such as the "metal stock" version shown here

MAT M49

Submachine gun

Captured from the French army and copied in North Vietnam

RPG2 Rocket Launcher

Copied from the German "Panzer Fast" model and used as an infantry supoort weapon. Also shown is the plastic explosive warhead it fired

Type 50 Submachine gun

Mass produced copy of the Soviet PPSh-41

Type 64 Silenced Pistol

Silenced pistol used for Special Operations such as assassinations

M14 Rifle

Upgraded version of the M1 Garand (the primary weapon of WWII). During the course of the Vietnam war, the Army further upgraded to the M16 model, but the M14 was still used as a sniper rifle.

M60 Machine Gun

The primary machine gun following WWII. Though the M60 was superseded by the M249 (Minimi), a scaled-down version of the M60, it continues to be used today.

M16A1

First used in the Vietnam War, and the main weapon of the U.S. Army. The model in use today is the upgraded M16A2.

XM177E1

Also called the "M16 Commando," this is essentially a shortened version of the M16. There is also a XM117E2, which has a barrel that is one inch longer than the E1 model.

M79 Grenade Launcher

A 40mm caliber grenade launcher with a maximum range of 400 meters. A proven infantry support weapon. Incidentally, a grenade launcher was developed that could be attached to an M16 to make the M16/M203 model.

Model K Submachine gun

Purchased by the CIA from Sweden for use in Special Ops missions. The bolt proved to be too noisy, however, and so they were taken out of service in 1969. Replacing the Model K were the Ingram and the Uzi, both of which were fitted with silencers.

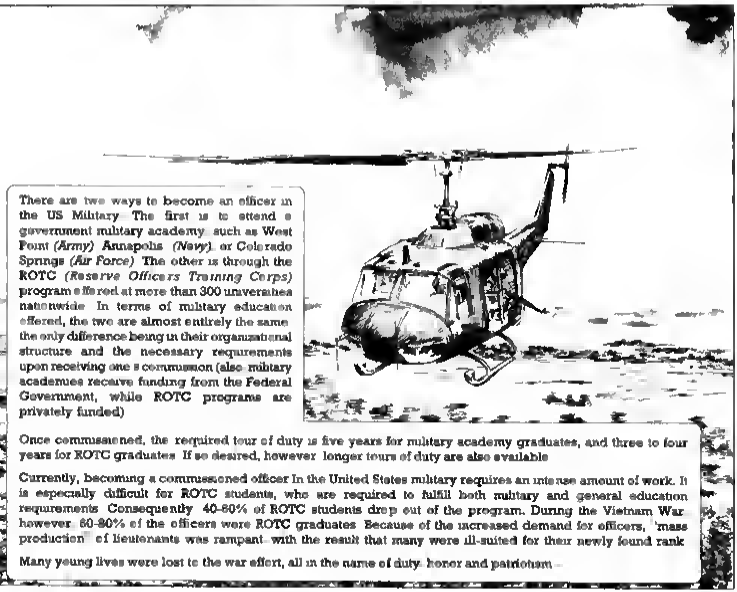
THE VC AREN'T GOIN' ANYWHERE SAY, YOU A "WEST POINTER?
I WAS ROTC. WHAT'S YOUR NAME?
GEORGE HENDRICK, CLASS OF '66.
OKAY, LT. HENDRICK THE CHOPPER WILL TAKE YOU TO A SMALL PLATOON JUST OUTSIDE OF OUR POSITION.



There are two ways to become an officer in the US Military. The first is to attend a government military academy such as West Point (Army) Annapolis (Navy) or Colorado Springs (Air Force). The other is through the ROTC (Reserve Officers Training Corps) program offered at more than 300 universities nationwide. In terms of military education offered, the two are almost entirely the same - the only difference being in their organizational structure and the necessary requirements upon receiving one's commission (also: military academies receive funding from the Federal Government, while ROTC programs are privately funded).

Once commissioned, the required tour of duty is five years for military academy graduates, and three to four years for ROTC graduates. If so desired, however, longer tours of duty are also available.

Currently, becoming a commissioned officer in the United States military requires an intense amount of work. It is especially difficult for ROTC students, who are required to fulfill both military and general education requirements. Consequently, 40-60% of ROTC students drop out of the program. During the Vietnam War, however, 80-90% of the officers were ROTC graduates. Because of the increased demand for officers, "mass production" of lieutenants was rampant, with the result that many were ill-suited for their newly found rank.

Many young lives were lost to the war effort, all in the name of duty, honor and patriotism.

"West Pointer = A graduate of West Point Military Academy

THOSE WIRES ARE BROKEN
I PUT IN THE REQUEST, BUT THEY STILL HAVEN'T ARRIVED YET
NO EXCUSES STEAL IT IF YOU HAVE TO WE NEED THOSE WIRES TRIPLE-WOUND, BY THE BOOK
YES, SIR!
WHO'S THAT?
THE SENTRY, SIR.

WAKE HIM UP.
AS OF NOW, THE PENALTY FOR NAPPING WILL BE SEVERE.
WHAT'S THE PATROL SCHEDULE AROUND HERE?
WE DON'T DO THAT ANYMORE. WE WERE LOSIN' TOO MANY OF US TO AMBUSHES.
WE START AGAIN, THIS AFTERNOON. YOU HAVEN'T BEEN DOING ANYTHING, HAVE YOU?
THE OLD LIEUTENANT STAYED IN HIS BUNKER ALL DAY.
WHAT?! WHY?
'CUZ SOMETIMES THEY SHOOT AT US FROM THE BUSH
WHO'S LEADING?
RODRIGUEZ. HE'S THE BEST.
YOU CAN LEARN STUFF HERE THEY DON'T TEACH IN SCHOOL.

MAN, THIS IS NUMBER TEN!
HA HA HA!
YOU'RE ON DUTY! THAT MEANS LOSE THE CHATTER, AND LOSE THE CIGARETTES!
YES, SIR!
HE SURE TALKS A LOT OF SHIT FOR AN FNG.
BAOM!
click

[3]FNG — NG stands for "New Guy." The F does NOT stand for "Friendly"

[1] RO = Radio Operator

[2] DUSTOFF = Name given to medical "helicopter ambulances" used during wartime

THIS PLATOON IS OUT OF ORDER! WE MUST MAINTAIN ROE!
WHILE ON PATROL, KEEP NOISE AND LIGHTS TO A MINIMUM. NO TALKING, NO CIGARETTES!
AND NO BUG SPRAY! THE SMELL CAN TIP OFF THE VC.
C'MON LIEUTENANT, WE GOTTA USE THE SPRAY.
FORGET IT. YOU SHOULD'VE LEARNED THAT FROM JUNGLE TRAINING.
STARTING TOMORROW WE DO PATROLS EVERY DAY, MORNING AND AFTERNOON.
IF WE KEEP A REGULAR PATROL, THE VC WON'T HAVE A CHANCE TO SET THEIR BOOBY TRAPS.
PATROL ROUTES AND TIMES WILL CHANGE DAILY, SGT. MAJOR. I LEAVE THAT UP TO YOU.

[1] ROE – Rules of Engagement. The ROE specify various requirements to command and direct units prior to exchanging gunfire in the front lines.

[2] Bug spray – Also called "bug juice" by the soldiers.

IF YOU HAVE ANY FREE TIME, YOU SHOULD USE IT TO REINFORCE OUR POSITION. NAPPING AND IGNORING ORDERS REFLECTS BADLY ON YOUR CO.
ANY PROBLEMS, AND YOU'RE OUT OF HERE. UNDERSTOOD?
THE GUY WHO STEPPED ON THE MINE DURING TODAY'S PATROL
LIEUTENANT, MY PLATOON'S RUNNIN' SHORT OF MEN.
LIEUTENANT, SIR? IT'S DELTA CP. THEY SAY THAT LANSON'S DEAD, AND THEY NEED A STATEMENT OF DEATH.
LANSON? WHO'S THAT?
ALRIGHT, EVERY DAY, I'LL JOIN YOU FOR ONE PATROL. DISMISSED
MAN. WHAT A TOTAL ASSHOLE.
YEAH. HE'LL GO RUNNIN' BACK HOME SOON ENOUGH.

Statement of Death

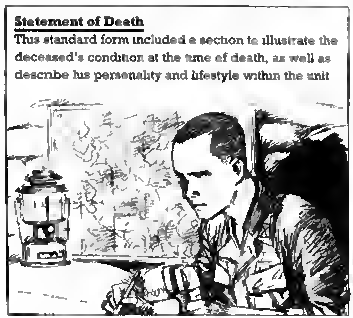
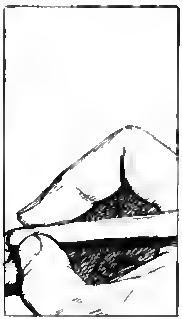
This standard form included a section to illustrate the deceased's condition at the time of death, as well as describe his personality and lifestyle within the unit





In 1965 and 1966 16 000 lieutenants began their tours of duty Seven percent of them were West Point graduates Under the law passed in 1838 soldiers were required to serve a minimum of four years The first veterans of the Vietnam war came home in July of 1970—even for the West Pointers there were no guarantees of a lifetime career in the military

Following WWII the Army instituted a "Get promoted or get retired" policy in order to maintain the strength of their fighting force Of 100 newly instated lieutenants, 82 made the rank of first lieutenant Of these 84 made it to captain, 72 to lieutenant commander 64 to lieutenant colonel, and 34 to colonel. Of these only two men—after 22 years of service—made it to the rank of brigadier general

In other words lieutenants were an expendable commodity

READY?
YES, SIR!

TAKE TWO OF THOSE M-72 ROCKET LAUNCHERS THE MORE FIREPOWER THE BETTER
RO. I NEED YOU BEHIND ME AND AT MY RIGHT AT ALL TIMES REPORT OUR POSITION EVERY THIRTY MINUTES
ROGER, SIR.

WHO ARE THEY?
GOOKS FROM THE VILLAGE. THEY'RE LOOKING FOR FOOD.

Postscript

I think it was around 1989, soon after the fall of the Berlin Wall, when I got the idea for Apocalypse Meow. I was watching Tour of Duty on video, and I thought to myself, "I could tell the same kind of story about the Vietnam War using rabbits, and it would be good." It certainly took a long time for the project to see the light of day, though.

I owe a debt of gratitude to the editor of Combat Magazine (hereafter, CM) for publishing my work. Up until then, I'd been perceived as more of a 'straight line" author, one whose work was grounded in realism. Even recently, a certain publisher told me, "If you keep drawing stuff like this, you'll be signing away your career as an author."

Around 1991, I asked Nakamura (an assistant of mine at the time) to work on the rabbit sketches I'd done for my rough draft. He did, going "Wow, this is easy." I dropped my plan to help him become a professional author—the guy just doesn't use his head. I told him not to use what he'd drawn, because it was based on my draft—but later, I found that he'd gone ahead and stuck it in a fan comic. This is your problem, Nakamura! You don't get it, do you? I wonder if the next thing we'll be seeing from you is a rabbit black knight.

The title I'd used for the comic in CM magazine, 'Dog Shit One' is a nickname for lowerclassmen at West Point. But even after several installments, it just wasn't very interesting. I couldn't get into the story at all. I came up with the idea of changing characters to rabbits, and faxed a draft to the editor of CM. "Interesting," came the reply. "So is this one going to be 'Cat Shit One?'" And that was the origin of the name "Cat Shit One."

I think it was a good idea to (force them to) change the contents of the story as drastically as I did. If you're not into the story, it doesn't matter what you draw—it's just not fun. It's anything but. If someone says to me, "Whoa, what happened to Dog Shit One?!" all I can say is "Sorry," and leave it at that. We live in a world where people can get away with having millions of dollars in bad debts, so I'll ask that you be kind enough to forgive the actions of a mere comic book artist.

Rough sketches, seen here for the first time.

Nowadays, I do the bulk of my work on computer. I started using a Macintosh 7500/100 three years ago, and I recently bought a G3DT266. For software, I've been using Photoshop and Painter ever since I saw Denshi Rikkoku ('Wired Nation') on NHK-TV. To be honest, neither the hardware nor the software is very user-friendly. I think it takes one to two years to get used to the hardware, and then about another two years to master the software. And of course, during this time, there are upgrades in both the software and the operating system.

Drawing by hand is quicker, less stressful, and free. But for those artists with little talent, a computer is a good tool because it makes revisions a lot easier. I went with a Macintosh because someone told me Macs are easier to use than PCs when it comes to computer graphics. I don't spend any time on the Internet, so I only use my computer for work—still, it's a real pain, what with all the freezing, error messages, constant upgrading, etc. If you're thinking about using a computer to draw, you're going to need some help from people who know a lot about computers and software. To be productive, you'll also need to have a good understanding of the relationship between resolution and file.

Computers have gotten a lot less expensive lately, so now may be a good time to get one. About ten years ago, following a recommendation from my assistant, I purchased an X68000 for about $3,600. For all that money, though, the software was very difficult to use and wasn't very practical. The X68000 became a game machine, and both I and my assistant got hooked on strategy games (resulting in a huge delay in our work schedule). Right now I'm really into survival gaming. I haven't been able to spend much time on it recently, though, so I'm feeling a bit frustrated. AND I don't have time to go to my favorite bar near the western entrance of Shinjuku Station. Next year I'd like to take a whole month off—but that may not be possible!

Survival games are good physical exercise, and they've helped me make many friends outside of my work. I highly recommend them, because they'll remind you of the war games you used to play as a kid. It's kill or be killed, and the 120% adrenaline rush will get you hooked. We usually play in Gotenba, so please join us, if you have time. We will welcome you.
